What are SEO and SEM?

Search engine optimization (SEO) is the practice of maximizing the volume or quality of traffic to a web site (such as a blog) from search engines via “natural” or un-paid (“organic” or “algorithmic”) search results as opposed to other forms of search engine marketing (“SEM”) which may deal with paid inclusion.

Search Engine Optimization (SEO) Versus Traditional Advertising

A low cost per impression of online marketing with SEO is appealing, in comparison with other traditional marketing such as TV commercials or print ads etc. These are published once a week; SEO is “always on” 24 hours per day, seven days per week.

Additionally, only those users who are searching for specific terms see the listing, making it significantly more relevant than any of the above listed tactics.

With traditional marketing your brand is exposed to many potential customers and clients, but how many of these people are actually interested in what you are selling? Using the Internet and search engines as a medium to reach your target market, you guarantee that people find you when they’re interested in the service you have to offer. Think of it as something akin to proactive yellow pages.

The higher the magazines readership, the more you pay. Even with pay-per-click (PPC) and other forms of paid online marketing you only pay for the views of people who are interested in your service/products. SEO is even more cost-effective, in the long run, providing quality exposure for a relatively small financial investment.

SEO / SEM definitely is a great for big businesses, with large quantities of money to sink into massive marketing schemes, but for the small-to mid-sized businesses, online marketing is the only way to go, providing a level and quality of exposure comparable to that of big businesses for a relatively small investment.
